

J. W. Wilsie tells of a freak of weather which happened during February near his old home in Wisconsin. With a deep snow on the ground and winter conditions prevailing, lightning struck a barn, causing it to catch fire and burn down.