

A number will remember reading last fall an account of the suicide of Sam Holm near Hammar. The day after the funeral a bachelor brother of his who lived with the family disappeared and his whereabouts could not be ascertained. This spring, when the thaw came his body was found floating in a small lake a short distance from the house, indicating that he, too, had died by his own hand. He had a number of years before attempted to commit suicide.