

Hannaford Enterprise—Homer Howe, who lives west of Revere was taken to Fargo on Sunday, January 29, suffering with an acute attack of appendicitis. The doctors at St. John's hospital found the appendix perforated, but the operation for some time gave every promise of being successful, but later complications set in, and Mr. Howe died Friday evening, February 3rd. The Howe family had just recently located in this community. Mrs Howe and two children survive. The youngest child was born January 9, being less than a month old when the father died.
