

When H. E. Black went out to his barn Tuesday morning to feed the stock he found their Shetland pony was dead. He does not know what could have caused its death as there were no marks on it, and the evening previous seemed all right every way. This animal was a great favorite and pet of the children.