

Fate sometimes plays queer pranks on a person. Some ten years ago O. B. Hoff owned a small amount of Oklahoma oil stock, which he let go by default as he did not consider it worth paying taxes on. Last week he received a letter from the company stating that the party who bought the stock is now worth a cool half million.