

Tom Kokett was seriously injured Wednesday night by being thrown out of his wagon and striking on his head. We learn that while driving home from a neighbors, he got lost and when west of Frank Genzel's home a short distance the team started down an embankment and one of the wheels of the wagon struck a rock and Mr. Kokett was thrown out and is believed his head struck a rock as he lay unconscious for some time. The man who was with him succeeded in stopping the team and, with assistance from the Genzel home, Mr. Kokett was taken to their place where he was made comfortable for the night. Thursday he was removed to his own home, where we are informed is being cared for by Dr. Wanner, but is in a very critical condition. He will probably be taken to Fargo as soon as the attending physician thinks he's able to make the journey.
