The Jim Jam Jems, the publication which has gained so much notoriety, since its first appearance, and which has caused much trouble and annoyance to many, is about ready to come in for its share of trouble. The federal court now being held at Fargo, has decided that the publication should be barred from being carried by express as well as the mail, and Sam Clark, editor and Clarence Crockard publisher, have been indicted and released on a $5000 bond. This publication has a large circulation in other states as well as this state and there are a large number of people who have been trying every effort possible to have the publication put out of business, some of whom have come in for their share of "roasting" in strong degrees. Sentiment is divided on this publication, as some seem to think that it is doing good by exposing some of the illegal methods used by some of the victims, and others claim it is not a fit publication for the household, owing to the terms of language used.

The Fargo Forum has again changed hands, J. P. Dotson of Crookston, Minn., a practical newspaper man who has spent the greater part of his life in the newspaper business, and has been financially successful, is the new owner. The Forum has had a hard row to hoe every since its organization and has been a losing proposition, and it is hoped by the many friends of Mr. Dotson that he can put it on a paying basis.

County School Notes

A number of new school houses have been built in the county during the past summer. Several are not yet finished owing to difficulty in getting carpenters. These school houses are or will be model one-room schools with the latest approved methods of lighting, heating and ventilating.

During the past month State Rural School Inspector MacDonald visited twelve of the country schools and spoke favorably of all. There are still a number of schools to be inspected.

Many improvement are noted. Several districts have fenced their school yards and planted trees. About twenty-five new heating and ventilating systems have been installed. Eldridge has purchased a drinking fountain. Edmunds and Cleveland schools have new furnaces. The patent heaters and ventilator that were in these schools will be installed in the country schools of the two districts.

Children from all parts of the county are sending in samples of the corn and the potatoes, which they have grown. The exhibit will be held November 11th and a large attendance is expected.
