

Northwood Gleaner: S. R. Kirby, "the Medicine Man," who for about a year past has made Northwood the mecca for "the lame, the halt, and the blind," who have benefitted as their faith, imagination or the possible curative powers of his peculiar medicines and decidedly obnoxious treatments may have decreed, left Northwood on Tuesday afternoon to resume his practice whence he came—on his farm near Thief River Falls, Minnesota, where report has it that he has erected a large private hospital for his use and that of his large following.
