

Dr. Hoffman's flowers just in front of his building were the only plants in town that did not benefit from yesterday's rain. As the shower came from the south none of the moisture reached the buds and Dr. Hoffman had to remedy the defect with a sprinkling can. Geo. Knauss happened along and the spectacle of the doctor watering his plants during a rain shower, appealed so strongly to George's sense of humor that he wishes the whole world to share in the joke.
