

While out duck hunting last week Ronald Snyder was hit in the forehead with a duck shot. There were several boys out hunting together, and they happened to take up such positions that ducks got in between them with the result that a stray shot struck Ronald. Luckily the injury is not serious, and the lad can consider himself fortunate that he escaped without more serious consequences.