

Hans Haaland returned last week from Norway where he went last fall with the intention of making his permanent home there, but became tired of the old country and decided to return to the United States. He found no difficulty in returning to his country in spite of war conditions. He will visit relatives here and then go out to the Pacific coast.