

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Jackson came home from their honeymoon Saturday. The boys had prepared a right royal reception for them including a tin can band, a dilapidated buggy drawn by a weary-looking mule and decorated with tin utensils, baby carriages, etc. The newly-weds, however, avoided this reception by having Claus Jackson's car meet them at Rogers and driving into town from the west.

Mrs. Chester Jackson was most pleasantly surprised Saturday afternoon when the ladies of Hannaford had gathered at the home of Mrs. Claus Jackson for the purpose of giving her a kitchen shower. Parcels were hidden in various places in the different rooms and Mrs. Jackson was made to search for them. She soon accumulated a number of useful kitchen articles. At five o'clock a most delicious lunch was served by the ladies in charge.
