

Walum News Notes

Miss Grace Wogsland had the misfortune of receiving a very painful injury last Sunday evening. She was going into the house and slipped on the doorstep and falling in such a manner that the sharp edge of the doorstep met her knee causing a deep gash and bruise. Dr. Benson was called to dress the wound and her condition is now reported to be improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Trangsrud of Cooperetown visited with relatives here last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Rohlwing returned home from Waterloo, Iowa, last Tuesday where they had been to attend the funeral of Mr. Rohlwing's sister.

A. D. Anderson motored over from Woodworth Tuesday on business.

Miss Elizabeth Carroll returned home last Tuesday from Pekin, N. D., where she has been teaching school.

The severe dust storms that visited this section the early part of last week were the worst of the kind known of in years. The wind blew a terrific gale taking with it all that was not tied or staked down. Wash tubs, boilers and barrels were frequently met on the highways. Some of the grain fields where the land is light will have to be resown as the grain and sand were carried away with the storm.

Mrs. O. A. Gilbertson and daughter Olive left for Fargo Thursday where Mrs. Gilbertson will have her eyes treated.

Mrs. J. McMains arrived Friday morning from St. Paul to visit relatives for a few days after which she will go to Havre, Mont.

Mrs. Haldor Stromme was at Cooperstown between trains Friday.

While that sixty-mile an hour wind blew last Sunday Jas. Carroll unfortunately met a sharp piece of tin while going through a gate between the house and the barn, which cut a deep gash on his nose. However, the wound did not prove to be serious, but Mr. Carroll reports that he has not seen the piece of tin since.

Isn't it queer the rapid changes that come about in this world of ours; when we were children the quietness of the night was seldom broken except for the occasional howl of a coyote. Now when one lays down to rest you hear that everlasting chug of the motor vehicle. What next.

Arne Hovland was at Hannaford between trains Saturday.
