Lover Weiseman had a narrow escape from drowning last Tuesday forenoon. Together with a number of other boys he was bathing in the creek just below town when he ventured beyond his depth. The other boys attempted to aid him but were unable to get him out of deep water. Then some of the boys ran up to town for help and the prompt action of J. A. Cotton was all that saved the boy. He ran down the hill and jumped into the water and after a few moments succeeded in locating the boy and bringing him to shore. Prompt aid was administered by A. F. Kereke and others and soon the boy regained consciousness and is now none the worse for his narrow escape.
