

Julius Aarestad has returned to his home from a camp in North Carolina where he had been to receive training in a tank corps. The ending of the war made unnecessary the further training of the members of the corps.