

Community Is Again In The Grip Of Flu

The dread influenza epidemic which is sweeping over the country has struck this community with a force that seems to equal it with the epidemic of the same kind that raged here in the fall of 1918. About 50 new cases developed here last week. Most of them were in the country districts, but several cases have occurred in town also. In a few instances pneumonia has set in but in most cases the epidemic is of a milder nature. The local station force of the Great Northern is considerably handicapped as the agent and both operators are confined to their homes with the flu and new men were rushed here to fill their places.
