Lewis Johnson, Mrs. Olof Johnson's father, was seriously injured one day inst week by being kicked by a horse. He was coming down from the hay loft when in some manner he stumbled up against one of the horses in the barn, and the horse kicked him, knocking him unconscious, in which condition he remained for nearly half an hour, when he finally found strength to go to the house. He is now resting easier, and under the care of his daughter Christine, who is a nurse, it is expected he will soon be up again.
