

In a letter to his parents, dated Jan. 14th, Philip Thoreson states that he is now "Somewhere in France," his regiment having been transported there from a point in England where they were first landed. He stated that the mail service was very poor as he had not received a single piece of mail since arriving in Europe.