

FATHER OF BINFORD WOMAN DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Dr. F. J. Duggan, father of Mrs. A. J. Anderson, of Binford, died following a brief illness, at his home in Grand Forks, Tuesday, Jan. 18th.

The following account is taken from the Grand Forks Herald:

Dr. F. J. Duggan, for more than forty years a practicing physician of Grand Forks, died this morning at 6 o'clock in his home, 321 North Third street. Death followed an illness of neuralgia of the heart, which had extended over the last two weeks.

The funeral service will be held from St. Michael's pro-Cathedral, with Rev. Father Dougherty officered in Calvary cemetery.

Dr. Duggan was taken suddenly ill while walking on the street on January 3, and was carried to his home. Physicians summoned to aid him found that he was suffering from neuralgia of the heart. Practically all of the time during the last two weeks his condition had been considered hopeless, and members of the family who were summoned to his bedside have expected his death momentarily.

Dr. Duggan was 70 years of age, and his death this morning closes a long and picturesque career, begun here in territorial days. He was one of the first physicians to come to Grand Forks, arriving here in 1880, when Grand Forks was the most western point in the territory being reached by a railroad. He established a practice shortly after reaching here, and became known in many parts of the northwest for his activities in the medical world. Some years ago when Grand Forks and this vicinity was visited by a sweeping epidemic of typhoid fever, Dr. Duggan did notable work in relieving suffering, and his work during the influenza epidemic here in 1918 was widely commented upon, because of its success.

In the upbuilding of civic and educational activities during the early history of Grand Forks, Dr. Duggan played an important part and he has been actively identified with the city's growth.

Born in Lloydtown, Ontario, Dr. Duggan lived there during his early years of his life. He took his college and medical courses at the University of Toronto, and was married before coming west, but Mrs. Duggan who survives her husband, did not come to North Dakota until 1881. The family has resided here continuously since that time.

Surviving Dr. Duggan, with his widow are these ten sons and daughters, all of whom were here before death took place: Fred S. Duggan, Spokane, Wash.; Ray Duggan, Great Falls, Mont.; Mrs. John O'Byrne, DeGraff, Minn.; Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Binford, N. D.; Mrs. Walter Renden, Mandan, N. D.; Albert Duggan, of Spokane, Mrs. James Lyons, Frank Duggan, Hugh Duggan and Gertrude Duggan, all of Grand Forks. Several brothers and sisters residing in eastern Canada also survive Dr. Duggan.

"What's holding him up?" asked the amazed Sutton, as Denny Bolton from the north woods took blow after blow from the famous pugilist and never fell. Yes, what was holding him up? Grit, a grimness of purpose, the burning desire to make good, to grasp the opportunity that only comes "Once to Every Man."

Six reels of punch. Don't miss it.
