

Peter Dybwad and Ernest Rorvig had a narrow escape from serious injury Sunday when their team ran away. The boys were on their way to town to attend church, and while driving along the whiffle-tree broke giving the horses a scare causing them to run away. The boys were thrown out of the buggy, with the result that Mr. Dybwad's hip and side were bruised badly. Ernest escaped with a bad shaking up. One of the horses was cut from being stabbed with the neckyoke when the pole struck the ground. The boys managed to reach the home of D. A. Goplen, where Peter was cared for until next day when he was able to return to his home.
