SCHOOL NOTES

In what respect the mind and brain unite is not known, but it is known that their sutimancy is so closely related and their activities so strangely blended that it is quite difficult to assign their different function in what are called psychic phenomena. The mental activity of the school child's minds is marvelous and constitutes a natural evolution. The brain and sympathetic nervous system are situated between the mind and outward world.

They are the means whereby the mind secures a knowledge of things external to itself and by In what respect the mind

They are the means whereby the mind secures a knowledge of things external to itself and by which the mind acts on material things. The realms of nature would remain unknown to us and all mechanical manipulations in experiments would be impossi-able if it did not exist.

We have the material universe with its manifold phenomena, mechanism, systems and forces: then we have the mind with which to stidy these phases and with which to employ these forces: and we have a medium by which the mind and world are united.

Imagine the condition of a child born biind, dumb or deaf child born bind, dumb or deal without, the special senses of touch, smell or taste, what conception of the external world could the have? Or suppose it possessed all the special senses but lacked the motor nerves. How could it walk?

Washington's birthday was observed in the High School de-partment. All the grades had school Monday in order that a little work could be made up.

Again we take the opportunity urge parents to keep their sildren in school or else failure childre is certain.

It is gratifying to note that the public schools will be lodged in a commodious edifice next year in which more and better work can be accomplished. Surrounding along the public of the public of the school of the ings play an important part in the education of our children and nothing is more conducive to good results than a beautiful building.

Neatness and politeness should be insilled into the very atmos-phere of the school room and this can not be accomplished within dingy walls and untidy floors.

It was impossible to have our teacher's meeting Saturday last on account of the school house teacher's meeting Saturday last on account of the school house being disinfected. This is the third time that something has prevented this meeting from materializing. We trust the next time this meeting is announced the fates will be more propitious.

The program for Rhetoricals given last Friday was very interesting. The essays on the life of Washington and Lincoln were very good. Resais Stiles recited y good. Bessie Stiles recited creditable manner as also the others. The debate was ery good decided for the affirmative that ide having proven that Lincoln was greater than Washington. Religious News.

The result of three weeks vival services in Crooks Miun. is the conversion of Crookston 116 persons and great refreshing to all the churches, arrangements have already been made for union tent meetings in June.

The question of retaining th present rules concerning amus ments will be a vital one in th amus General Conference of the Meth-odist Churches to be held in San odist Churches to be held in San Francisco in May. In the dis-cussion of the subject at the last General Conference in Chicago many of the leading members of the Conference were in favor of removing articles pertaining to amusements from the Discipline, The deaths in the Iroquois Thea-ter of two Methodist-ministers and a layman who held the hightropuois Theater of two Methodist-ministers and a layman who held the highest position in the Epworth League possible for a layman to hold adds to the interest of the question. Whatever action may be taken no one call-suphold the worth of men who yoluntarily assume a pledge and then persistently break it as did these Christian leaders.

Dr. A. H, Bradford, moderator of the last National Council of Congregational Churches, writes Congregational chirches, writes that the chief subject for con-sideration at the next National Council to be held at DesMoines in October will have much to do with new and deeper spiritual life in our churches.

in our churches.

It is interesting to note that the Southern Presbyterians are the only churches which openly denounce the United States Senate for electing Dr. Edward ate for electing Dr. Edward Fverett Hale chaplain of the Chamber. Dr. Hale is a man eminently fitted for this position. He has shown his faith by a long life of good works.
