THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

GOSSIPFROM WASHINGTON.

The postmaster general finding that postmasters were careless in their treatment of transient newspapers in the mails have istransient newspapers in the mails have issued an order directing all employes of the postoffice department to exercise as much care in handling newspaper packages as in handling letters. Every effort is to be made to get a newspaper package through to its destination. If it bears insufficient postage and the sender is known it is to be returned to him.

It is not impossible that within a very short time there may be some official changes in the postoffice department. The postmaster general has now been in office long enough to have obtained a fair knowledge of the character, ability, judgment and qualifications of his subordinates, and also to have gathered an intelligent idea of the nature and requirements of the duties performed by each one.

+ It is reported that the president continues inexorable in the defense of the executive order reducing the internal revenue districts and will not change it to suit any-one. The orders of retention are being pre-pared, but the new arrangement will in no instance be put in force before July 15, and perhaps not so soon as that.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

One of the largest and most important railway contracts ever made in Canada was completed at Montreal on the 23d between the Ontario Pacific railroad and Lorenza M. Shute, representing American capitalists. The amount of the contract is between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000. The road will be about 700 miles long and will start from Cornwall to Ottawa, thence to Sault Ste. Marie and connect with its American system in conjunction with the Northcan system in conjunction with the North-ern Pacific. It not only affords the short-est road from ocean to ocean, but has at each terminus a splendid harbor—Portland, Me., in the East, and Portland, Oreg., in the West. The Northern Pacific will no doubt make arrangements with the On-tario Pacific, thereby distancing all com-petitors.

An indescribable scrimmage took place. The shrieks of the children, the wailings of infants and the implorings of women mingled with the angry cries of pastors and officers of the contending congregation. Many women fainted, and many had their Sunday clethes almost torn off them. Dr. Parker and Mr. Evarts had a terrible struggle. They beat each other and tore each others hair frightfully, and finally fell into the immense tank, firmly grasping each other. Each strove to drown the other. So busy were the other fighters that they could not observe the accident that happened to their pastors. Some of the peace makers turned their attention to the struggling pastors. It was found impossible to tear them apart, so they were taken out, locked in a fierce embrace, and both unconscious. They were finally separated, though they clung to each other with the tenacity of drowning men, and resuscitated. After a little talking the ministers were reconciled, and it was a source of great rejoicing to the Baptists that Dr. Parker had been completely immersed. That soveral were not killed in the fearful struggle is a miracle. Many are confined to their bed from the effect of fright. Both olergymen are in a sad condition mentally and physically. The unfortunate affair has scandalized the whole Christian community.

Threatened Barb Wire War. A large meeting of the barb wire manufacturers of the country, licensees of the firm of Washburn & Moen, Worcester, Mass., was held washourn a moen, worrester, mass, was held at the Tremont house. Chicago, throughout Thursday. Forty delegates, representing every state in the Union except California, were present. The discussion, of a private but important nature, was on the propriety of paying further royalty to the Washburn company for the privileges enjoyed by the licensees. This matter has come up for consideration in view of the conflicting decisions—on the one hand of Judges mas come up for consideration in view of the conflicting decisions—on the one hand of Judges Blodgett and Drummond, of the Illinois court, and on the other, of Judges McCreary and Love, of Iowa. The firm imme-diately refused the use of the machine to any other unless a large royalty were paid upon each nachine used. Finally many establishments in the country became the licenses of the Massachussetts firm, and it was reaping an immense profit from the business. The mease finally became tired of paying a large percentage of their profits in royalties, and about fifty suits have grown out of the trouble. Washington Special: Commissioner Dudley is finding that $100,000,000 is a good deal of money to pay out in one year, and he cannot accomplish the task. Taking into account the return to the credit of the pension account at the beginning of the year of some $15,000,000 not used last year, the net expenditures from the appropria tion for the current year will not much exceed $60,000,000. He started out with a programme to use up the unexpended $15-000,000 turned over from last year and $85,000,000 besides. He finds that such a vast sum cannot be distributed. Although the office might allow the cases, the agencies cannot check it out to the individuals. cies cannot check it out to the individuals. The result will be nearly $20,000,000 unexpended to be carried forward to next year, when it will be deducted from the estimate for the next appropriation. Gen.
Dudley will be disappointed in not being able to dispose of all the average cases as ne promised, but it was beyond the range of possibility to make such a vast expenditure with the present machinery for payments.

Fine Cattle for the Northwest.

A London cablegram of the 24th says: A splendid lot of cattle let Glasglow this week consigned to Mr. J. J. Hill of St. Paul. It includes fourteen cows and heifers from the herds of the earl of Strathmore, the earl Richard Ingold, a desperado, while evading arrest for felony, was shot twice in the was called upon by a large number of half-try. They cost nearly $20,000. With them is a two-year-old bull of Lord Fitz Harding's, which Mr. Hill bought for $5,000. This is the handsomest lot of cattle that ever left Scotland for America. Mr. Hill has a fine stock farm near Hotel Lafayette, Lake Minnetonka which is already stocked with the choicest blooded horses, cattle and sheep. When his stock becomes more numerous it is his design to distribute at certain seasons of the year, some of the best among the principal towns on the Manitoba line, for breeding purposes, and thus improve the stock of the country.

Heavy Lumber Failure in Wisconsin. Merrill, Special: W. Wright, successor to McCord & Wright, lumber menufacturers has made a voluntarily assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The bond of the assignee, Henry A. Jewell of Oskosh for $400,000 has been signed by Separate Services $400,000 has been signed by Senator Saw-yer and Mr. McCoy. As near as can be as-certained the assets are in excess of the lia-bilities to a considerable extent. The credbilities to a considerable extent. The creditors seem to realize this, apparently having uneasinees, and feeling that they will be paid in full. It is thought that the liabilities are about $200, 000, and the assets $300,000 more. The mill property has been looked upon by the lumbermen as one of the finest in the Northwest, and certainly has advantages and surroundings which would naturally make it such.

Embezziement in Boston.

Arthur H. Blaney, cashier and headbook-keeper of the Massachusetts Loan and Trust company, has confessed to embezzling $44,000 of the company's funds owing to mining and other stock speculations. The first intimation of anything wrong was on the afternoon of the 18th inst., when it was found that Blaney was $7,000 short in his accounts. His attention being called to the discrepancy, he said he had taken it for discrepancy, he said he had taken it for temporary use and would restore it the next morning. He did so, and being questioned about other rossible discrepancies, assured the president of the company that I is deficit did not exceed $7,000. It was deemed best to suspend Blaney. Crowded Moscow.

At an early hour this morning I was awakened by the measured tramp of feet beneath my window, and, on looking out, I beheld a dense contingent of the Moscow Fire Brigade, scarcely to be distinguished from regular soldiers, packed into a huge tribune at the entrance to the Kremlin, and doing their best to test the sustaining powers of the wooden structure. But it stood the severe strain, and off the heavy, gray-coated men marched to continue their experimental labors in the galleries on the route of triumphal entry, and their number is great. Balconies, roof-tops, domes, steeples, windows, and every inch of out-look space that might afford precarious foothold for the twittering swallow, have all been converted into vantage ground to view the Czar of all the Rus-sias pass on Tuesday from the Petroffsky Palace, just outside the city; to the Palace of the Kremlin, in the heart of it. What the citizens of Moscow are now preparing with all their might and main to do may be well described in the words of Marullus, the tribune, to the commoners of ancient Rome:

"Many a time and oft, Have you climb'd up to walls and battle ments. To towers and windows, yes to chimney-

GOING TO CHURCH.

The Hardship of It Early in the Present Century.

In the "Memoirs of John A. Dix," just published, the following autographical experience is related, giving a picture of the discomforts incident to worship in the "meeting house" during the first decade of this century. The village of Boscawen, G. H., furnishes the material for the sketch:

The period was approaching when I was to be sent away from home for my classical education; but, before I enter upon it, let me cast back some glances at my native village. I have spoken of the eeting house at one of its extremities. The society was congregational in its form. It acknowledged no earthly head. I had a distinct idea of this peculiarity in its doctrine from the conversations which I had at my father's house. My mother was a sincere, devout and trustful Christian. My father was a believer, but not a member of the Church. I sometimes thought his views did not accord with those of the preacher; but he said nothing to warrant such an inference. No man was more regular than him-

on Sundays, and they were the only days in the year for which any religious exercises were observed, except the first Monday of every month, on which eve-ning a prayer-meeting was held. I de-rized no agreeable impression whatever from these religious observances. The from these religious observances. The meeting-house was, like most others of that day, painted white, covered with shingles, full of windows, with plain, plastered walls inside; it was cold and dreary in its aspect within and without. It had no window blinds; and as the sun moved round the building in summer the congregation moved about in their pews, to escape from the burning rays. The winters were awful; the thermometer often fell twenty or thirty degrees below zero. There was no fireplace or furnace, not even a stove. To place or furnace, not even a stove. To this arctic temperature we were exposed two hours in the morning and two hours in the afternoon. The sermon was almost always an hour long, and the prayers and psalms, and reading of the scrip-tures, occupied about the same time. In my whole life I have never suffered so much from cold. My mother always took a foot-stove with her; and it was more frequently under my feet than hers. In the sleigh on our way to meeting we were always comfortable, for we were enveloped in buffalo-skins. But we could not take them with us into the meeting-house. When the wind was high the cold was merely insupportable. The window sashes vibrated and rattled in their loose frames, and the cold sire. in their loose frames, and the cold air poured upon us through numberless in-lets. My feelings were anything but de-votional; and I pray God to forgive me the many secret irreverences of which I was guilty. The preacher was a learned and conscientious man; but I hated his long discourses (drawn out, as it seemed to me, with a malicious perverseness) when I was perishing with cold. The strangest speculation took possession of my mind. I had read in some book in my father's library that certain holy men had voluntarily submitted to the severest inflictions. One, whose name does not occur to me, lived on the top of a column for a number of years, exposed to all the vicissitudes of the search same forms in the hour lived in a sons. Supposing him to have lived in a good climate, I wondered whether he suffered as much as our preacher, holding forth by the hour in an atmosphere fifty degrees below freezing point. I won-dered whether the latter, like the holy father, was acting on a principle of self-infliction, or whether he was punishing his congregation for their stubborness in sin. If his motive was merely personal, then I wondered why he could not digmiss the congregation and perform the penance by himself instead of making us the companions and the victims of his martyrdom. I could not help secretly wishing on these wretched occasions, that he might freeze his feet, that his arm might become so benumbed with cold that be could not gesticulate, or that his tongue might cleave to the roof of his mouth. It was not because I had any malice against him in my heart, but because he was, by protracting his ser-mons so unreasonably, indicting on me sufferings too great to be borne. I knew him better in after years, and became sincerely attached to him; and if he had not been ignorant of all that passed through my mind during those winter services, I would have confessed my uncharitableness and implored his forgiveness. But there never could have been any reconciliation between me and the meeting-house. I always detested it; I never looked upon it as the house of God. Town meetings and elections were held in it. I had seen it defiled with tobacco-juice; I had seen it desecrated by fisticuffing in the heat of political conflicts; I had heard its bare walls ring with tumultuous laughter, when some man, who had been prosperous in money-making and assumed airs, was elected hog constable by acclamation. These scenes were too often uppermost in my thoughts when the sermon was in progress, and a devotional frame of uind was impossible. Half a Million Base Ball Bats.

New York Star.

The largest manufactory of ball bats is at Hastings, Mich., where one hundred men are employed. Half a million bats are supposed to be the demand for the present year. Ash is the staple bat wood. A proportion of fancy, and necessarily high-priced bats are made of cherry. Including the different woods and sizes, there are twenty-two styles of bats made for the trade, ranging in price at retail from ten cents for a juvenile article up from ten cents for a juvenile article up to $1.50 for an æsthetic cherry bat. The Hastings factory will use in the neighberhood of 350,000 feet of ash, 250,000 feet of basswood, and 50,006 feet of cherry lumber this season, which means about 2,500 gross, or thirty car loads, of bats. Another bat factory at South Bend, Ind., will consume about 125,000 feet of lumber, and one at Grand Rapids, Mich., 75,000 feet more.

A Scene With a Spring Poet. From the Brooklyn E gle.

"I think you were just too mean foranything!" exclaimed a bewitching dam sel as she bolted into the managing editor's office, sank into a chair and burst

"Oh, look here! Don't," remonstrated the managing editor, slipping the cork-screw down the back of his neck and the still ligeted pipe into his coat pocket. "I published your poem, you know? Promised I would and I can show it to you. Don't make a row!" And the managing editor wrapped a beer bottle in a page of manuscript and; ordered the office boy to take it to the foreman, with instructions to carry it as a leader under penalty of law. "It was the prettiest thing we ever had in the Eagle, and I set it up in type myself so there wouldn't be any mistakes. Let up on the weep now, that's a good girl."

"I—I know you pub published it!" moaned the fair visitor. "But what did it look like when it came out? When

"I wrote it;

And then you made me say,
"Here's to the madam that hove me swill!"
"And if you had any sense, you'd have known that it was:

"Here's to the maiden that loves me still!"

And here she went into a fresh set of convulsions.
"But that's all right!" pleaded the managing editor, wishing he'd left out that whopper about setting up the mat-

"The new idea about the alley was an improvement on yours, because it brought it under the head of this new realistic school of poetry, and I tell you," added the managing editor, solemnly, that poem, just as it appeared in our paper with your name attached to it, has attracted more attention and been more attention and been more activations of the property of the prop extensively copied than any other pro-cuction that has appeared in our paper for 20 years."

"Do you mean to tell me that as a fact?" demanded the fair poetess, straightening up with a jerk. "Is that "If it hadn't been that we run short of Eagles and had to let people have our exchanges so they could scrap that poem, I could show you the gem is in over 2,000 first class journals," replied the managing editor, smiling cheerfully and rubbing his hands.

"Didn't any of them seem to notice that awful blunder, where it said:
"Fine pigs illume the monkey shing?"

"Really I've forgotten whether I wrote

"Utterly out of the question," responded the managing editor, assuming prodigious independence. "In fact, I think they would do better to wait perhaps two or three years. The other one will last at least that length of time. No. I must decline to touch them under three years," and the managing editor turned to his work and relighted his pipe, as though he had not seen a visitor that day.

"Utterly out of the question," responded to him at once.

Statistics recently collected at the Eastern Pennsylvania show that of 780 young men received their under 21 years of age 755 had no trades. A VOUDOU DOCTOR.

Sent to the Tennessee Penitentiary for Imposing On a Sick Negro Woman.

From the Nashville (Tenn.) American. By far the most curious case that has stirred up people in the precincts of the yesterday. The prisoner was a squat built, monkey faced, thick lipped negro, and a stronger argument than even the late Col. Payne's Ariel, for the belief that no pair of his species entered Noah's of North Dakota.

and a stronger argument than even the late Col. Payne's Ariel, for the belief that no pair of his species entered Noah's ark. Leah Sharp, his prosecutor, was a little bullet headed wizened faced negro woman, whose physiognomy denoted anything but a high degree of intelligence. The exhibits in the case were the dirtiest of home spun bags, about three miches in diameter, containing Burley's celebrated "luck battery," consisting of a loadstone, piece of steel wire, and some red nigger hair, a gold mounted brooch, a brass cameo ring, a woman's photograph, and several other tricks and odds and ends that would puzzle the witch o. Endor herself to describe.

Lean Sharp testified thut she was lying very ill on the 24th of February last, when Ed. Burley, vondou doctor, called to see her, and, standing beside her bed, told her he could restore her to her usual strength by "means of his "luck'battery," which he had suspended around his neck by a string. But he informed her this "luck battery" could only be worked by means of two pieces of gold or silver money and a photograph. He assured the foolish woman, however, if he did get the two pieces of gold or silver money, he would endow her with no end of good luck for the rest of her life, and she would always afterward be able to find gold. The woman then gave him her $10 breastpin, ring and photograph, and he took his "luck battery," the loadstone, and bit of wire out of his pouch and showed Leach how the little iron horse shoe picked up and held on to the wire. Whatever doubts the woman had had about the ability of the battery to perform the miracles claimed for it, were swept away by the ability of the doctor to endow a little colt's shoe (she called it) with the power to pick up a piece of wire and hold on to it until it was taken away. His victim then insisted that he should perform the charm. This was done by the vendou doctor putting the pieces of gold in the bag with the "luck battery" and shaking them together. He then took the loadstone, attached the steel wire to

A LUCKY SLIP.

It was about 12 o'clock on a dark, cold February night; the rain had been pouring down steadily for several days. One could hardly imagine a more bleak, deslate station than Beechwood on that night, with one lamp making darkness visible, the platform an inch deep in rain, and a sleepy station-master and porter giving the only indications of

Mr. Hugh Lambert, as he got out of the train and went to look after his luggage, felt very thankful that he had only a mile to drive before reaching home. He was a man of about forty, old for his years and slightly gray; in figure he was tall and well made, and his face had an expression of cleverness.

As a rule, few passengers alighted at Beechwood by that late train; but on this night there were two beside Hugh Lambert—a young lady and her maid, with a goodly pile of luggage. Hugh was wondering a little as to where they could be going, when he heard the girl ask the station master if there was a carriage waiting from Mrs. Newton of Priarton.

"Why, the road has bin blocked up since six o'clock miss! There's bin a big landslip and they're working all night get to Priarton this week, what with the slip and the floods."
"What am I to do?" exclaimed the girl, with a face of blank despair. "Is there no other road to get to Priarton?" Hugh Lambert was listening with some interest. Mrs. Newton was the nearest neighbor, and a great friend of his; this must be her niece of whom he had so often heard. He approached the lady and raised his hat courteously.

I am sorry to say there is no other road to Priartown; nor is there any way of getting there to-night. I heard of the landship only about an hour ago, and know that the road is completely blocked."

"What can I do?" the girlasked again. "Is there any inn here, or must I take the next train back to the nearest

"The last train's gone an hour; there ain't no inn in the country wide save publics"-this from the porter.

"You must let me arrange this matter for you," said Hugh Lambert. "I think I must be speaking to Mrs. Newton's niece, Miss Nayton?" "You have guessed rightly," and Dorothy Nayton looked up eagerly delighted to find some one to whom she was known, if only by name.

She was a bright little body, pleasant-looking, though she could not lay claim to great beauty—a brunette with a clear olive complexion, dark eyes, and a straight nose. She had crossed from her home that afternoon, she told her new acquaintance; and so of course her aunt might not have expected her to arrive so early.

"You must let me take care of you,"

I will take you there, and send a message to your aunt as soon as possible to let her know that you are safe." Just at that minute a horse was heard galloping up the dark road, and presently a man came hurrying into the sta-

"Is there a young lady here for Priar-ton?" he asked.

Dorothy went forward eagerly.

"If you please, miss, here's a note from Mrs. Newton. I've been four hours getting here; I had to ride twelve miles around, for the road's blocked and the floods are out. I had to get a boat at the low meadows and horrow and at the low meadows, and borrow another horse on this side; and that has delayed me in getting here."

Hardly waiting to listen to this long explanation from the old coachman, Dorothy tore open the note and read:
"MY DEAREST CHILD.—I am in great distress. The road between here and the statress. The road between here and the sta-tion has been blocked by a tremendous landslip; so it is impossible to send the car-ciage to meet you. I have therefore for-warded a note to my great friend Hugh warder a note to my great friend High Lambert, asking him to send for you and your mand shelter for the night, tin we see what is to be done. He is the only neighbor that side of the landslip, and is so charming that you need not mind going to him; it is indeed the only thing to be done. In great haste

"I was to have left it at Leyton, sir," he said; "but I heard you was coming by this train." Lambert a note.

Lambert glanced at the contents, and then turned to Dorothy. "Your aunt has kindly trusted you to me; so now you won't mind accompany-ing me home, will you?" he asked. "I think it is you that ought to mind," was Dorothy's answer. "I am afraid we shall be giving you so much trouble. It is very good to you." A minute later she was seated beside him in the dog-cart, spinning along the dark roads into what was to her an unknown country. Dovothy was very tired, and was thankful to reach the house and be han-ded over to the care of the housekeeper. Very soon she was fast asleep in an old-fashioned oak-panelled room that would have seemed very ghostly to her, but that she was too much fatigued to take much heed of her surroundings; and, beside her maid was in the dressing-room and within call for half past 9 breakfast, and was shown into a bright little morning room. Mr. Lambert met her, and was so kind and Lambert met her, and was so kind and anxious to make her happy and at home that she very soon found herself talking to him as if she had known him for years, instead of his being an acquaintance of a few hours only. She was rather an unconventional little person, and by no means stiff or cold. She had warm-hearted Irish manners, and looked at the world in a trustful way, beliaving neonle and trusting in them. looked at the world in a trustful way, believing people and trusting in them firmly, unless she found that they were not to be depended upon, instead of proving before trusting, as colder natured and perhaps wiser folk do. She had been brought up by an old uncle, for whom her elder sister kept house. They had no brothers, and their parents had both died years before. Mrs. Newton was their mother's sister-in-law; but her husband had quarreled with the girl's uncle and guardian, Mr. Nayton: so it was not till after the death it was not till after the death the latter that Dorothy and her sister had been allowed to go to Priarton. Now, however, they hoped to spend a good deal of time there; but this was Dorothy's first visit.

Mary Nayton, her sister, was about twenty-seven and exceedingly placid and sensible; but she took things so quietly that Dorothy was always allowed te go her own way and do whatever she liked; consequently, at twenty-three she had learned to think and act for herself, and as her nature was impulsive and warm-hearted, she indulged in a great many theories of her own, hated conventionalities, believed firmly in Platonic friendships, and not unfrequently got into trouble in consequence into trouble in consequence. It very soon struck Hugh Lambert that she was different from most of the girls he had met, and she interested him accordingly.

It was with a feeling of relief that he had found the road would be impassable for some days; so he wrote to Mrs. Newton, begging her to let Dorothy re-main with him instead of returning home, and asked an elderly cousin who lived a few stations off to come and act

The old lady accepted the invitation and the post allotted to her; but as she was a great invalid, Dorothy and Hugh were constantly left alone together. He liked to sit in the dusk and hear her sweet voice singing to him, to watch her arranging flowers, and to consult her about the garden. The girl felt su-premely happy—he was so kind to her, such an agreeable companion in every way that she thoroughly enjoyed his so-

A fortnight went by and the road was pronounced perfectly safe; even the floods had subsided. So Hugh had no excuse for detaining his fair guest longer and though very reluctant to part with and though very reluctant to part with her, he drove over to Priarton.

She was standing in the hall as he left that night, after diamer, and held out her hand to say good-by.

"I can't thank you enough for all your kindness," she said softly.

"Nay, my child, I can not tell you what a pleasure it has been to me; but perhaps you will know some day," he replied, and she went up stairs wondering what he meant.

she believed so armly in platonic friendship that she would not let hersel think that her feeling toward Hugh Lambert was anything else; and, although she knew he disbelieved in her theory in the abstract—for they had argued the subject very warmly—still she thought that his sentiments were well defined in her case. Hugh Lambert felt as if something very bright had come into his life since he had known Dorothy. She was so quaint and naive in speech, new and fresh with ideas and theories, so fresh and unaffected in manner, and yet so womanly withal, that during those few days they had spent together she had completely won his heart. But he was not likely to act on the spuz of the mo-ment; he was so much older than she; now could be expect the bright little body to regard him as anything but a steady-going friend? But still, day after day he would ride over to see her at Priarton, and when he returned would sit and think of how she used to look in the rooms that now seemed so desolate. How he longed in the evenings for the sound of her voice singing to him "The Land o' the Leal" or "Auld Robin Gray!"

And Dorothy began to watch for his coming; and if, by chance, something detained him at home, how long the day seemed, and how uninteresting every-thing seemed! At first she justified it to herself by the thought of her friendship for him-a friendship which had ripened quickly in the peculiar circumstances of their meeting; but little by little, as time passed, and she had been at Priarton three months, it dawned upon the girl that the feeling she enter-tained for Hugh Lambert was something more than mere friendship. She fought against herself with all the strength of her nature; she could not bear to prove false to her own theories and traitor to her favorite cause; but filled the strength of the stren ally she felt the struggle was hopeless, and made up her mind to keep her se-cret securely locked in her own bosom.

While zathering prinroses one sweet spring afternoon, Dorothy heard a step crushing the dead leaves, and saw Hugh coming toward her.

"I want to speak to you," he said. "Will you walk with me a little!"

Presently he turned sharply and took both her hands looking more in earnest than she had ever seen him look.

"I can't stand this any longer!" he cried out. "I must know my fate one way or the other. It is true that I am years older, but no one will ever care for you better than I do. If you cannot love me in return. I will go away and mever worry you any more, I give you my word. Am I to go, Dorothy?"

"Go! Oh, no!" she gasped out, hardly able to realize what she was saying, only feeling as if she could not breathe, her heart beat so wildly.

Not long afterward there was a happy wedding at the dear old home; and then Dorothy came back to brighten up the old house at Leyton.

Hugh Lambert would have been less or more than & man if he could have resisted triumphing over her a little; and, as they went into the library, where he and she had bravely defended her the-

FARM AND HOUSE.

Farming Brevities.

This insane attempt, says Mr. Slosson in the Western Rural, to raise from one to three hundred acres of corn, when only half the number of acres can be tilled as they should be, is beginning to dawn upon the minds of some from the few examples here and there practically

If there is any difference made in water given to various kinds of stock, it is obvious that milch cowsshould have the greater care, for it is well known that the milk is more or less affected by the food and drink of the animal, and when used it must in turn affect the user, as it is more or less near purity.

The winter radish should be sown about the middle of summer, and, like the turnip make its best growth in the Autumn. Pitted out of doors or buried in earth in a cool cellar, it will keep crisp all winter. An hour before using place the winter radish in cold water.

Be kind to your help. They will respect you for it and work the harder. Retire early. Take a good rest after dinner, no matter how pressing the work may be. After working and perspiring all day, do not sit down to rest and cool yourself in a breezy place. Colds, rheumatism and malaria are contracted in this way. It is better first to strip off the damp clothing, rub the body and put on dry clothing.

The officers of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, declare that hog cholera has been practically exterminated. Good news for the farmers of the country, if true. It seems that for weeks past unsuccersful attempts have been made by the Department to secure virus from infected hogs for experimental purposes on the place which Dr. D. E. Salmon, D. V. M., is superintending. The extermination of hog cholera would save millions a year for our farmers, and should it really turn out that we have got rid of the plague, the greatest pre-cautions should be taken everywhere to prevent the recurrence of it.

Care of the Plough.

If you have a very rusty plow, says a writer in the Cincinnati Times, pour about eight ounces of sulphuric acid, as purchased at the apothecary's, into a quart of water; do this slowly and very carefully, for it will burn hands, clothing or almost anything else; also use an earthen or crockery vessel, rather than a tin or iron one, Apply this to the rusty surface two or three times, making rusty surface two or three times, making each application as soon as the former one is dry. Then wash with clean water, and repeat the process. Give some of the worst spots a rub with a Bristol brick; wash again with water and wipe dry. Put a little kerosene around the bolts, and take the plow to pieces, scouring each piece to get off the remaining rust spots if necessary. This sounds like a formidable process, but the whole operation ought not to take over an hour. Oil all exposed surfaces with kerosene when you set the plow away. kerosene when you set the plow away, and when you do your spring plowing a very few turns will finish off the balance of the rust.

Close Planting.

The Farming World believes in close planting. It says: "Every farmer must know that to produce the heaviest possible crop a certain number of stalks must be upon the ground. It is often observed that the great sin of American agriculture is too thin sowing. Grass is nearly always sowed too thin, and the same is true of small grain. In England they sow four and five, and ometimes six, bushels of oats to the acre; in this country generally not more than a bushel or a bushel and a half. Hence in England they yield three or four times as heavy as in this country; we never hear of an extraordinary crop where less than three or four bushels to the acre are sown. Now, we venture to affirm that no very large corn crop was ever grown unless it was planted more than usually thick. In the crop of George W. Williams, of Bourbon county, Ky., the corn was planted in rows two feet apart, with a stalk every foot in the rows. This crop produced 167 bushels to the acre. Yet there is another advantage of close planting. The corn very soon becomes so dense that the ground is shaded, and the growth of the grass is prevented and the moisture re-tained in the soil. By this method of cultivation no grass is ever allowed to absorb the moisture from the earth, or to take up the nutritious gases which ought to be appropriated exclusively to the corn.

Osage Orange Hedge.

Secretary Chamberlain, of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, thinks of all fences Osage orange hedge is "the cheapest and certainly handsomest, if properly tended, and has several advantages that I may point out at some other time. But let no shiftless, or slack, or untidy farmer plant's hedge. He will constitutionally and inevitably neglect it; he will not rethe sets that died the first year; he will not braid or 'plash' it at the proper time; he will always be 'going to to trim,' and never trim, and his hedge will be anything but 'a thing of beauty and a joy forever.' Nor will it keep his steers out of his corn. And even the tidy farmer will find places and circumstances where hedge cannot be grown. stances where hedge cannot be grown soon enough, or where it is not best for other reasons to have one." The ordinary wire fence he considers too danger-gerous to stock, so he has a adopted a combination of wire and board where fences are unavoidable. One board is put between the two upper strands o wire, which acts as a brace the whole length of the fence. It should be nailed on firmly, and each with its ends close to those of the next boards, so that there may be no "give" when the wires are stretched. The board is placed down one space from the top, so that the wire above it may protect it from the cattle reaching their heads over and crowding with their necks and breasts, and breaking it as they will a single pine board on top without a cap.

Cookery.

SOFT GINGERBREAD. -One egg, one cup of molasses, one-third of a cup of melted butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of ginger, two and a half cups of flour and a little salt; dissolve the soda, in a very little hot water. Bake in a buttered tin.

LADY'S FINGERS.-One and an eighth pound of flour, one of powdered sugar, ten eggs; beat eggs and sugar as for sponge cake; sift in with flour one teaspoonful of baking powder and stir slowly. Make a funnel-shaped bag of heavy ticking or strong brown paper; through the hole in the small end push a funnel-shaped tin tube one-third inch in diameter at the small end and provided with a flange at the other to prevent it from slipping quite through; tie small end of the bag firmly around the tube, and you have a funnel-shaped sack with a firm nozzle projecting slightly from the small end. Into this bag pour the bat-ter, over which gather up the bag tight-ly, so that none will run out, press and run the dough out quickly into a pan lined with light brown paper (not but-tered), making each about a finger long, and about as thick as a lead pencil, being careful not to get them too wide. Sprinkle with granulated sugar, bake in a quick oven, and, when cool, wet the underside of the paper with a brush, re-move and stick the fingers together back to back. The bag when made of ticking will be useful in making macaroons and other small cakes.

tongue, and, with a truesing needle, run a strong twine through the roots and end of it, drawing tightly enough to have the end meet the roots; then tie firmly. Cover with boiling water, and boil gently for two hours; then take up and drain. Put six tablespoonfuls of butter in the braising pan, and when hot put in half a small carrot, half a small turnip, and two onions, all cut fine. Cook five minutes, stirring all the time, and then draw to one side. Roll the tongue in flour, and put in the pan. As soon as browned on one side, turn, and brown the other.
Add one quart of the water in which it was boiled, a bouquet of sweet herbs, one clove, a small piece of cinnamon and pepper. Cover, and cook two hours in a slow even, basting often with the gravy in the pan, and salt, pepper and flour. When it has been cooking an hour and the gravy. When done, take up. Melt two tablespoonfuls of glaze, and pour over the tongue. Place in the heater until the gravy is made. Mix one tablespoonful of the gravy is made. spoonful of corn-starch with a little cold water, and stir into the boiling gravy, of which there should be one pint. Boil one minute; then strain, and pour around the tongue. Garnish with parsley and serve.—From Miss Parloa's Cook-Book.

Breathe Through the Nose Alone.

Much has been written, and very properly, too, about the necessity of sufficient ventilation in the bed chamber, sitting room and shop, and verylittle of the need of perfect nose ventilation; and yet the latter, always and persistently active, has a more marked influence on the health than the former. Man in a savage state and all the lower animals breathe through the nose in repose or sleep; in fact, some animals cannot breathe through the mouth. Civilized man, while he may rejoice that he has surpassed his savage brother in the nobler things of earth, can well envy him his freedom from lung and throat diseases and impaired voice and hearing, which are so often due to the vicious habit of breathing through the the mouth. The nose is designed in the economy of nature to prepare the inspired air for the lungs as it passes through the winding nasal canal and pharynx it by with warming it, and filtering or purifying it from foreign snbstances. The nose is also the organ of the sense of the smell, and has a direct influence on the voice, playing the same part the curves of the cornet in enriching the tones; it is also closely associated with the sense of hearing. The effect of mouth breathing is to bring the cold, dry, dusty air directly in contact with the delicate mucus membrane of the air passages, often producing irritation, which results in sore throat, swollen tonsil, hoarseness and lung troubles. Snoring, the pleasant little trick of causing the soft palate to vibrate can only be accomplished by breathing through the mouth. Sore throat, hoarseness, lung troubles, deafness, snoring and impaired voice flow as naturally from breathing through the mouth as blood from an open vein. And now, in the language of the famous American traveler, George Carlton: "If I were to endeavor to bequeath to posterity the mort important motto, which human language can convey, it should be in three words, "shut your mouth."—Toledo Journal.

A Boon for Ghosts and Ghost-

esses. Ghosts of all kinds ought to feel extremely indebted to the legislature of the state of Ohio in America. That sapient body has decreed that henceforth anybody who claims to be a spiritualist "inedium" must pay a yearly tax of £40 for permission to practice his socalled profession. The news will be received with considerable satisfaction in ghostly circles, for the inconvenience to which respectable spirits have often been put in the way of attending seances and rapping tables amounts to a positive scandal. A phantom that had retired for the night was liable to have his legitimate repose disturbed at any moment by the inconsiderate "summons" of a professional spiritualist in the upper world, and could hardly call his soul his own. Everybody knows that the different states of America are allowed to manage all their local affairs and to levy taxes just as suits themselves, so long as their measures do not conflict with the constitution or with special laws passed by the supreme legislature. By the Maine Liquor Law, for example, anybody in that particular division of the country who desires to particular of the country who desired to the count who desires to partake of the flowing bowl has the trouble of going just across the border to gratify his propensities. It is almost needless to say that the state of Maine has a geographical fringe of most flourishing inquid bars. Its bound-aries on the north are beer taverns, and on the south are whiskey saloons, and its inhabitants are supposed to enjoy a good deal of domestic tippling on the sly, on the same principle by which Artemus Ward declared that a temperance hotel usually sells worse liquor than any other kind of inn with which he was acquainted. Why, therefore, should not Ohio, if it so chooses, follow the example of the wise men of Maine, and prohibit "spirits," though of a differ-ent sort? There are many good reasons why no such tax should be levied on "mediums" as is proposed, but the Ohio parliament is not likely to see the force of them just yet. Propably the chief result will be that those gifted with the remarkable faculty for interviewing members of the world of snades will charge an enhanced fee as the price of attending a seance. The lower class of mediums, who only call up a spirit or two a month, will possibly be thinned out under the operation of this financial law. But will it check the high-class impostors, or the sincere and affluent in-dividuals who believe in the genuine-ness of "spirit photographs" and impalpable apparitions, despite the many cases of proved swindling which have occurred? Anything that tends to hinder free inquiry into the regions outside of science is to be depreciated, and we should hardly have expected an exam-ple of intolerance towards unoffending phantom-raisers to originate in the American republic. Yet so it is. The ghosts and ghostesses will lead a much happier and easier life than of yore, but the persons who "raise" them at $2 an hour will have to put on some more "gate-money," or ply their avocation in an adjoining state.—London Telegraph.

How Millions of False Teeth Are Made. From the Wilmington (Del.) Star.

A reporter of the Star recently visited a factory in this city where false teeth are made by the million. In the process of manufacture the silex and feldspar in their crude state are submitted to a red heat and then suddenly thrown into cold water, the effect being to render them more easily pulverized. Having been ground very fine in water and the water evaporated the two materials mentioned are dried and sifted. The kaolin is washed free from impurities. These materials, with feldspar sponge, platina and flux in preper proportion for the enamel, are mixed with water and worked into masses resembling putty. This * done the unbaked procelain masses are ready for the moulding room. The moulds are in two pieces and are made of brass, one-half of the teeth or sections being on either side. The coloring materials are first placed in the exact position and quantity required and the body of the tooth and the gum is inserted in lumps corresponding to the size of the teeth. The moulds are then closed and they are dried by a slow heat. When perfectly dry they are taken out and sent to the trimmer's room, The trimmers remove imperfections and send them in trays of fire-clay to the furnace, where, having remained for twenty minutes, they are complete.

The Popularity of Great Men. It is all nonsense to say that because the people at large love cakes and aleas of course, they do—they will not tolerate any one who does not love cakes and ale too. They will not tolerate anything that looks like ostentatious virtue. But they will love all the better, the man who, not being in love with such delights himself, shows himself simply as he is, without the smallest deprecia-tion of those who care more for such in-dulgencies than he cares. The popular mind is wonderfully catholic in its tastes. Greatness of any kind, even of the purely intellectual kind, easily "fetches" as the phrase goes. Prince Bismarck is popular in Germany, General Grant in the United States, Lord Beaconsfield and Mr. Gladstone in England, Garibaldi was popular in Italy, all without any well-marked sympathy for the pleasures of the people, just because all of them managed to show strong character strongly identified with the national welfare.—London Spectator. welfare.-London Spectator.

Some "Bloated Bondholders."

The semi-annual payment of interest on registered United States bonds, which occurs in January and June, is now being made. While it is very difficult to obtain exact information as to the largest receivers of interest from this class of United States bonds, yet, like almost anything else here, it can be had if one

United States bonds, yet, like almost anything else here, it can be had if one wants it badly enough. This year the largest single bondholder the treasury department knows of is Mr. Vanderbilt, who will receive the interest on $27,000,000. A year ago he had $50,000,000, but he has disposed of $13,000,000 for some purpose. The next largest owner is Mrs. A. T. Stewart, who has about $30,000,000. As some of hers are coupon bonds, the amount of her holding cannot exactly be told. Ten years ago Mr. A. T. Stewart had $40,000,000 in bonds, the most of them being 6's. Mr. Gould has $13,000,000 in registered bonds and a large number of coupon bonds, which he keeps to use as collaterals in Wall street when he needs large sums of money. A California millionaire, Mr. Flood is the next largest holder. He has $15,000,000. Then there is an estate in Boston and three or four persons in New York would have each $10,000,000, and a lady in New York, unmarried, too—bas $8,000,000, and thees tate of Moses Taylor in New York has aire, Mr. Flood is the next largest holder. He has $15,000,000. Then there is an estate in Boston and three or four persons in New York would have each $10,000,000, and a lady in New York, unmarried, too—has $8,000,000, and the estate of Moses Taylor in New York has $5,000,000 and D. O. Mills, Whitelaw Beid's father-in-law, $4,000,000. I was surprised to learn that so is wealthy men held any large amounts of United States bonds as permanent investments. States bonds as permanent investments, but was told that the rate of interest is now so low that other securities are preferred that are considered just as safe and pay higher in erest.

On the other side of the water American securities are very popular and far preferred to those of other nations, because the rate of interest is higher than that paid by any other greater power. The house of the Rothschilds owns nearly one-quarter of America's whole bonded debt, as, including all the bankers of that name, they have $49,000,000.

Baron Leopold and Sir Nathan Meyer de Rothschild each own $30,000,000, and the head of the Vienna house has $25, 900,000 in his own right. The reason I have heard for their putting such extra-ordinary amounts into American bonds is that political and social systems are every day becoming more and more uncertain in Europe, and, therefore, if a general break-up should occur on the Continent or in England, enough would Continent or in England, enough would be left in the securities of the Great Republic to make them all very comfortable indeed, Lady Hannah de Rothschill, who married the Earl of Rosebery a year or two ago, brought to her really impoverished husband $20,000,000 in American 4 1-2s. I sincerely hope the rather priggish young earl (whose attempts at marrying an American heiress were notorious, and whose treatment of a charmingly clever young lady in New York was outrageous) appreciates his not very handsome but thoroughly good wife without her bonded attractions. Baroness Burdett-Coutts-Bartlett has $20,000,000 of our 4 1-2 s, the Duke of Suther-000 of our 4 1-2 s, the Duke of Suther-land $5,000,900, and Sir Thomas Brassy $5,000,000. I learn that the Queen was asked a year or two ago, when she had some money to invest, if she did not want some United States bonds, and that she declined with more peremptoriness than courtesy. When the Rothschilds took the French loan of 1872, and helped France to pay the milliards Germany forced from her, the firm borrowed 500.000.000 francs in gold upon $100. ed 500,000,000 francs in gold upon $100,-000,000 in United States bonds, the first time in their history that so large a sum was loaned on the promise to of pay another country than that directly treating.—Washington Herald.

A Temperance Story.

In the district court recently George Basto, machinest at the Greylock mills, an intelligent mechanic who has always earned a good salary, was arraigned for nonsupport of his wife. The charge was made by his wife, who came from Utica, N. Y., for that purpose. When Mrs. Basto entered the court her eyes Mrs. Basto entered the rested on her husband. Taking a seat, rested on her husband. Taking a seat, with her hand over the region of her heart, as though to still the paltitation, she cried frantically: "George, why do you leave me? Why do you put me away from you! I want to live with you. I love you more than anything else in world, and I don't want to live aw y from you." The husband gazed steadily at the court, shaking his head deprecatingly. The wife began to cry and Lawver Thayer who appeared for the husyer Thaver, who appeared for the husband's defense, forgot his client's cause, and pleaded with Mr. Basto to return to his wife, who sat before him in tears, but the husband refused, and said that he had tried it too often; that he had three times returned to his wife and each time the result was the same. There was no charge of infidelity on either side and no jealousy. It was on-ly Mrs. Basto's horrible appetite for inly Mrs. Basto's horrible appetite for in-toxicating liquors, said her husband, and he could not live with her, for he had three times tried it. The husband re-turned to Greylock, and the wife in tears to a house in Washington avenue, where her husband volunteered to pay her board while she stays here.—North Adams Transcript.

I have been bitterly opposed to any medicine not prescribed by a physician of my choice. My wife, fifty-six years old, had come by degrees of disease to a slow sundown, and doctors failed to benefit her. I got a bottle of Hop Bitters for her, which soon relieved her in many ways. Gents—I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have used up four bottles of your Hop Bitters, and it has done me more good than all the medicines that they zood than all the medicines that they could use on or with me. I am old and poor, but feel to bless you for such a reief from your medicine and torment of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic; another took four quarts of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after these four bottles of your medicine, I am well, and my skin is well, clean and smooth as MILTON, DEL., Feb. 10, 1880.
