An Auspicious Event.

No event of the present year can augur better for the growth, commerce and in-dustry of this place than the formal opening for business of the Bank of Cooperstown, on Saturday last. A city's Cooperstown, on Saturday last. A city's financial institutions are not only the foundation on which her commerce must be built, but are also mirrors which reflect the state of trade and industry. Cooperstown justly feels proud of its mirror in this respect.

The proprietors of the institution. Messrs. Geo. L. Lenham and J. M. Burrell are men of extensive financial expensive financial rell, are men of extensive financial experience, who are in no way lacking in energy and enterprise. The bank though an infant in age, is not so in vigor or financial strength, as the capital commanded is abundantly large to meet all the requirements for a general banking business. The affable cashier, Harry G. Pickett, is truly the correct man for the responsible position he occupies. Ever nections over America generally, with regular correspondents in St. Paul and New York. Though less than a week old a volume of business that outlines a flattering career for the institution has already set in. May the star of its use-fulness to this community never set.
