Antiquity.

This week an old land mark disappears. The grainery of Cooper Bros., formerly used as the register's office, from which the county books were taken journ till July 15th, 1884, at 9 a. m. by the Hopeites, disappears before the The Baptist church will be erected on march of civilization. It is eighteen months since this relic of antiquity was erected.

The "Reliance" Harvester and Binder. An important advantage in the Reliance Harvester and Binder is in the plunger bolt being done away with altogether and a cam movement substituted, which prevents the binding apparatus getting easily out of repair, which is sometimes the cause of no little delay and loss to the farmer.

and loss to the farmer.

Another advantage of the Reliance over all other machines is in the knife, which is held in such a position that it can be bound with wire and yet work perfectly, cutting the twine as easily as if a sharp edge were presented. A dull knife will not stop the farmer's work.

Another advantage is in the light draft of the Reliance, and still another advantage is in the substitution of an oscillating board in place of the ordinary canvas adjuster. This packs the bundle in place, making an even butt, saving wheat and time.
