-'The American Garden says it is about time that we should stop speaking and writing about roots "seeking" their food, just as if they possessed intelligence. The multiplicity of roots in fertile spots is due solely to the extra stimulus thereat to freer growth than at more sterile points. Where there is more food of course there is more growth, other things being equal.

-Oyster Soup.-Pour one quart of boiling water into a skillet; then one quart of sweet milk, stir in one teacup of rolled cracker crumbs, seasoned with pepper and salt to taste. When all come to a boil, add one quart of fresh oysters; stir well, to prevent scorching; add a lump of good butter about the size of an egg; let it boil up once, then remove from the fire immediately. - Detroit Free Press.

-Almost daily complaints are heard of seeds that did not grow and seeds that produced something different from what was bargained for, and it often happens that a large part of the year's labor and consequent income is lost. ### THE MAN DICKENS.

How He Impressed Acquaintances and In-

Dickens was only thirty-three when I first saw him, being just two years my junior. I have said what he appeared to me then. As I knew him afterward and to the end of his days, he was a strikingly manly man, not The lustrous brilliancy of his eyes was very striking. And I do not think that I have ever seen it noticed that those wonderful eyes which saw so much and so keenly were appreciably, though to a very slight degree, near-sighted Very few persons, even among those who knew him well, were aware of this, for Dickens never used a glass. But he continually exercised his vision by looking at distant objects, and making them out as well as he could without any artificial assistance. It was an instance of that force of will in him which compelled a naturally somewhat delicate frame to comport itself like that of an athlete. Mr. Forster somewhere says of him: "Dickens' habits were robust, but his health was not." This is entirely true as far as my observation extends. Of the general charm of his manner, I despair of giving any idea to those who have not seen or known him. This was a charm by no means dependent on his genius. He might have been the great writer he was and yet not have warmed the social atmosphere wherever he appeared with that summer glow which seemed to attend thim. His laugh was brimful of enjoyment. There was a peculiar humorous protest in it when recounting or hearing any thing specially absurd, as who should say: "'Pon my soul, this is too ridiculous! This passes all bounds!" and bursting out afresh as though the sense of the ridiculous overwhelmed him like a tide, which carried all hearers away with it, and which I well remember. His enthusiasm was boundless. It entered into every thing he said or did. It belonged doubtless to that amazing fertility and wealth of ideas and feeling that distinguished his genius. - Adolphus

Wanted Ton Thousand Live ploss

London Truth: A singular advertise ment attracted my attention the other To freshen velvet hold the wrong day. It was a call for 10,000 live fleas, to be delivered in parcels of not less than 5,000 each to a certain address. I confess my curiosity to know what a man could want with such a vast num-ber of these interesting little insects led me to go and make personal inquiry. I found that the man was a flea-trainer, and I gathered these facts: That it takes three months to teach a flea to do than manure to bank the cellar wall anything worthy of a public performance; that only one flea in a thousand can be taught anything; that a performing flea usually lives a year with great-care; and that in response to his advertisement he had only received in three days one package estimated to contain 3,000 fleas, and they came from the dog pound. He paid $25 for them, and they were very good fleas.

"There's method in that man's madness" remarked the Superintendent of an Insans Asylum of one of his patients. "How does it show itself!" questioned the visitor. "Why, he always asks for a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup—when he has a cold." "Ah! I see."

A Remarkable Surgery.

A Remarkable Surgery.

The science of surgery has made such wonderful progress in modern times, that the most intricate and delicate operations are now undertaken and carried to a successful issue. There are now several well authenticated cases of what is known as pneumotony, that is to say, the removal of of diseased portions of the lungs in cases of consumption. While, however, this delicate operation has sometimes been successfully performed, the risks attending it are so great, and the chances of recovery so slight, that it is seldom resorted to. The safest plan in consumptive cases is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This will always cure the disease in its earlier stages, thoroughly arresting the ravages of the terrible malaby, by removing its cause and healing the lungs.

"That one struck scenter," remarked the pugilist, as he landed his fist on his opponent's nose.

Heating Trains by Steam.

During the present cold snap, with the thermometer ranging from 12° to 28° below zero, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has been experimenting with steam heating for passenger trains. The experiments, it is announced to-day, have shown that the system adopted is a perfect success, and, commencing Dec. 1, the through trains between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis, and on the company's other through lines will be equipped as rapidly as possible, with the new steam heating aparatus. The St. Paul-road claims the credit of first bringing the matter of steam heating into general notice, and it now has the added honor of being the first Western road to carry its experiments in the matter to a successful issue.—Exchange.

"Yes; I shall break the engagement," she said, folding her arms and looking defiant; "It is really too much trouble to converse with him; he's as deaf as a post, and talks like he had a mouthful of mush. Besides, the way he hawks and spits is disgusting." "Don't break the engagement for that; tell him to take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It will cure him completely." "Well, I'll tell him. I do hate to break it off, for in all other respects he's quite too charmin all other respects he's quite too charming." Of course, it cured his catarrh.

Those who divert this somewhat common but precious fluid from its primary use to supply the physical wants of the human family must pay whatever price the original owners choose to demand. People may drink water if they will; it is perhaps as good a beverage as any, and is the basis of others less to be commended than itself; but if they insist upon drinking it before it has turned the wheels of the mill-owners they will find it costly. # Rheumatism

According to recent investigations is caused by excess of lactic acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, particularly in the joints, and causes the local manifestations of the disease, pains and aches in the back and shoulders, and in the joints at the knees, ankles, hips and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive and permanent cure for rheumatism. This medicine by its purifying and vitalizing action, neutraliz s the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists; in fact, I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of my time. I was also very bilious and suffered severely. I was recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I did. I have taken four bottles and am well. I gladly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla."—W. F. ## Symptoms of Catarri

Dull, heavy headsche, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and infiamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. However, only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unstuccessfully treated by physicians.
